Book Your Stay at the Apple Court House: A Showplace of Greendale History

By Amy Krenzke, Greendale Historical Society Board Member

The bathroom contains some of the original fixtures with modern upgrades.

The Original home at 5597 Apple Court has been lovingly restored by the Greendale Historical Society and is now accepting reservations for overnight stays.

Vintage accessories are seen throughout the house including telephone, typewriter and photos.

pen the windows, breathe in the fresh air and enjoy the sunshine. Summer is just getting started and you are roaming around the leafy green courts and paths of Greendale. The path leads you to a special place, a Greendale Original nestled on one of the uniquely named streets – Apple Court. The 5597 Apple Court house features all the vintage details allowing you to step back in history, yet with all of today's comforts. You now have the opportunity to stay in this lovingly restored home, part of our National Historic Landmark Village.

Before we visit the home, a bit about the unique history of the Village of Greendale, one of only three "Greenbelt" towns in the U.S. This little Village, the brainchild of the U.S. Government, was built during the Great Depression to encourage families to move from Milwaukee to this carefully planned "garden community." The entire Village was built in two years and opened to its first residents on May 1, 1938.

All the homes seem the same, yet each is a bit different. As you walk around the Village you'll see row houses, single homes, and wooded terrain that melds into backyards with inviting walking paths everywhere you turn. Life in a Greendale Original is very special in many ways. I know, because I have the privilege of owning one next to Greendale Village Hall.

Living in one of these Greendale Originals allows you to experience historic touches in your everyday life. This includes beautiful woodwork and floors, spacious lush yards that flow into your neighbor's, and the sturdiness of a quality-built home. Look at the splendid wood beams in the living room and other extraordinary details such as black metal door handles and solid wood doors – even the remnants of the coal bin. Our restored home on Apple Court has kept its vintage style and welcoming feel. These homes are from the 1930s, but the modern merges well in a Greendale Original.

Is your interest piqued to experience first-hand what living in a Greendale Original looks and feels like? Excellent! The Greendale Historical Society has just the solution for you – as we are now accepting reservations. Stay a few nights, a weekend, on a work trip, a weeklong family reunion, or just for a special romantic anniversary "staycation" away from home. Whatever the reason, during your stay at the "Showplace of Greendale History" on Apple Court, you will experience what it's like to live in a Greendale Original. Step back in time to 1938, yet with amenities like air conditioning (no coal furnace!), WiFi, shower, laundry, and more right at your fingertips.

Reserve your visit with us today on VRBO or Airbnb. All proceeds assist the Greendale Historical Society to maintain this historic gem which will enable us to host school tours, special events and historic learning opportunities that support our community.
